About Our Speakers

Jane Lansing, Current Chair of the League of Women Voters Minneapolis' Reimagining Public Safety Committee, is a 35-year resident of Minneapolis and a retired executive with a long career in technology and global business. She is on the Dean's Advisory Board for the U of MN College of Science and Technology.

Medaria (Rondo) Arradondo, Retired Minneapolis Police Chief, is a Minneapolis native, graduate of Roosevelt High School and Finlandia University in Hancock, MI. He joined the Minneapolis Police Force in 1989, serving in multiple roles until he was appointed Chief in 2017. As Chief, he earned high community respect for his caring approach and reforms, such as banning the use of military assault weapons by police.

Sue Abderholden, MPH, Executive Director, NAMI Minnesota (National Alliance on Mental Illness), has advocated for legislation to build the mental health system, create a statewide mobile mental health crisis system, promote criminal justice diversion programs, and ensure that peace officers are receiving quality training on mental illnesses and de-escalation.
